(MCIP)

Hybrid format: in-person (Ljubljana, Slovenia) and online
Two-year training course (2026/2027)

Course leaders:
Prof. Gregor Žvelc and assist. prof. Maša Žvelc

Mindfulness- and compassion-oriented integrative psychotherapy is an approach to psychotherapy that integrates relationally-focused integrative psychotherapy (Erskine, 2015) with mindfulness and compassion-based approaches. The aim of this two-year course is to develop the essential skills and competencies of the MCIP. The training empowers therapists to embody the wisdom of mindfulness and compassion while also learning specific methods and interventions that promote mindful awareness and self-compassion in clients. The approach is described in detail in a book published by Routledge: Integrative Psychotherapy: A Mindfulness- and Compassion-Oriented Approach (Žvelc & Žvelc, 2021).

About the training

MCIP training is advanced psychotherapy training designed for mental health professionals and psychotherapists with an established practice in psychotherapy or counselling. It is open to certified psychotherapists and clinicians, as well as to psychotherapists in clinical training who work with clients under supervision.

The training consists of 120 hours of professional training per year, including five weekend workshops annually, and an online mindfulness/self-compassion skills training (held weekly over two months). The program includes didactic teaching, case presentation, live demonstrations, relational group process, the supervised practice of skills in small groups, and analyses of transcripts/videotapes.

The training leads toward the certificate in Mindfulness- and compassion-oriented integrative psychotherapy (MCIP).
